

What Columbia Likes

Columbia describes everything he likes about the desert -

'I like all the palms and the watery wells.
I like all the moonlight and fresh nightly smells.
I like all the dunes that rise up and then fall.
So there's nothing, just nothing, I don't like at all!'

Think of another environment where an animal may live. You may like to choose one of these -

- The top of a tree.
- In a rainforest.
- The bottom of the ocean.
- Under a large rock.
- A burrow in the ground.

List all the things an animal would like about the environment.

Have a go at writing a poem that describes all the great things about the environment, like the one Columbia sang.
